

Parents are welcome to accompany their child in the cleaning area if they wish. The parent's presence is often comforting and reassuring in a new situation.

If there is restorative appointment the parent is welcome in the restorative treatment room. One parent may come in the room and stay in the room. Coming in and out during treatment is distracting and not advised. Please do not stand outside the room and "peek" in the window. This is distracting and creates a traffic problem. Also, we ask that parents be a "silent partner" when they are in the room during treatment so that we may establish a good, direct relationship with the child. Siblings are not invited in the restorative treatment room.

If siblings accompanied you and the patient to the office we ask that you do not leave them unattended. So if you wish to be in the restorative treatment rooms make sure you have someone to monitor siblings, or do not bring siblings to the appointment.
